TABLE 21.—PERSONS ENUMERATED ON BOARD VESSELS IN ENGLAND AND WALES AND IN ADMINISTRATIVE COUNTIES, URBAN DISTRICTS, RURAL DISTRICTS, AND CIVIL PARISHES.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.

- (1) The numbers in the Table include persons enumerated on board His Majesty's Ships and on Merchant Vessels, which were in the ports of England and Wales on the night of the Census or arrived there on the following day, and persons on Hospital Ships, Training Ships and Stationary Vessels, and on Inland Barges and Boats. The persons enumerated on His Majesty's Ships are distinguished in footnotes.
- (2) The persons thus enumerated have been distributed among the general population of the parishes contiguous to the waters in which the vessels were lying, with as much accuracy as the information obtained allows.
- (3) Fishermen at sea on the night of the Census, and not returning on 4th April, 1911, and persons on board vessels arriving in port later than that date, are not included.
- (4) The letters U.D., R.D., C.B., M.B., and C.P., respectively denote Urban District, Rural District, County Borough, Municipal Borough and Civil Parish.
- (5) In the Report on the Census of 1901 the corresponding Tables are numbered 18 in the several County Volumes, and 21 and 24 in the Summary Tables.

NOTE.—By the London Government Act, 1899, the area of the Administrative County of London was thus altered; besides certain other rectifications of boundary which involved very slight changes the Civil Parish of Penge was severed from the County, as was also a detached part of Clerkenwell situated at Muswell Hill, while the Civil Parish of South Hornsey, formerly part of Hornsey Parish, was added to the County. The population of South Hornsey prior to 1881 is not known, but an estimate has been made for each of the earlier periods, the figures for which are therefore to this slight extent approximative. Since the Census of 1901 certain small interchanges of area have taken place between the Administrative Counties of London and Middlesex, and London and Surrey; it has been possible only to correct for these changes the 1891 and 1901 populations.

* The rates have been corrected for the varying lengths of the intercensal periods.

† In London a special intermediate Census was taken in 1896. The parish of South Hornsey did not then form part of the Administrative County, but an estimate for this Parish is included in the figures for that year.

TABLE 24.—ADMINISTRATIVE COUNTY OF LONDON, OUTER RING, AND GREATER LONDON.—POPULATION 1861-1911 AND RATES OF INCREASE OR DECREASE PER CENT. IN INTERCENSAL PERIODS.

NOTE.—“Greater London” is a term used to describe the area covered by the Metropolitan and City of London Police districts; it contains besides the Administrative County of London a wide belt of suburban towns and districts designated for convenience the “Outer Ring,” the constitution of which is shown in Table 25.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.

Persons who were at sea on the night of the Census and did not arrive in Port on Monday, April 3rd, were not included in the Returns of Population.

The Vessels referred to in this Table were registered under Part I of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, and belonged to Ports in England and Wales.

The information is derived from a Return prepared by the Registrar-General of Shipping and Seamen.

CENSUS OF 1911.

TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE JOHN BURNS, M.P.,
PRESIDENT OF THE LOCAL GOVERNMENT BOARD, ETC.

CENSUS OFFICE,
LONDON, S.W.,
12th July, 1912.

SIR,

We have the honour to submit the second volume of the detailed abstracts of the Census Returns. The first volume gave the population, &c., enumerated in the several Administrative Counties, in Urban Districts (including County and Municipal Boroughs), with their constituent Civil Parishes and Wards, and in Rural Districts with their constituent Civil Parishes; the population enumerated in Petty Sessional Divisions, County Court Circuits, County Court Districts, and in numerous minor areas; also the population enumerated in institutions, on board vessels, and in barns, sheds, caravans, &c.

In this volume will be found the population figures of Registration Counties, of Registration Districts, and of Registration Sub-districts and their constituent Civil Parishes, also the aggregate numbers of marriages, births and deaths registered in each Registration County and District during the intercensal period 1901-1911.

In addition the names are given, together with the Civil Parishes in which they are situated, of over 15,000 places having no defined boundaries, such as villages, hamlets, &c., for which the population could not be separately ascertained.

The Parish.—In the introduction to the General Reports of the Censuses of 1901 and of various earlier Censuses, notably that of 1851, will be found accounts of the manner in which the more important local government areas came into existence, together with references to various Acts of Parliament concerned with their formation or development, from the famous Statute of Elizabeth (43 Eliz. c. 2), which legally established the (ancient) parish as the basis of Poor Law administration, down to the Local Government Act of 1894, which completed the organization of local government as we know it to-day and which partially restored the importance of the (civil) parish as the primary unit of general local administration. The modern civil parish, which has been defined in several Acts of Parliament as, in the words of the Interpretation Act, 1889, “a place for which a separate poor rate is, or can be, made, or for which a separate overseer is, or can be, appointed” and which is the unit, not only of the poor law system treated in the present volume, but also of the recently reorganized administrative system, and therefore has a place in the tables of the volume relating to administrative areas as well as in the present volume, is the outcome of a series of enactments which, for the purposes of civil administration, have altered the boundaries of a very large proportion of the ancient parishes, while at the same time, especially in the north of England, subdividing many of them.

At the commencement of the 19th century England and Wales contained about 10,000 parishes. These were generally units for both civil and ecclesiastical purposes, except that in Wales and the northern counties they were very commonly divided into “townships” for poor-law and other civil purposes. The identity of civil and ecclesiastical parishes was not, however, universal. The division of the inhabited parts of the country into parishes appears to have been completed about the time of Edward III. These “ancient parishes” continued in most cases to serve the purposes of both civil and ecclesiastical administration (which were much less sharply differentiated than at the present time) down to the beginning of the last century, but subdivisions and amalgamations appear to have been made or recognized from time to time by the ecclesiastical authorities, and it depended upon particular legal decisions whether these re-arrangements affected the parish as an area of civil government. The boundaries and even the numbers of parishes were very imperfectly ascertained, and the status as civil areas of ecclesiastically subdivided parishes was a matter of uncertainty and at times of litigation, but it eventually became settled that ecclesiastical rearrangements were inoperative for civil purposes. The number tended to increase by subdivision until from about 9,000, which are estimated to have been in existence at the revolution of 1688, it had grown to 10,693 "parishes and parochial chapelries" (ecclesiastical subdivisions of the parish which, if of ancient date, might be civil units also) at the Census of 1821. The townships of the northern counties were not separately included in this total, and the first Annual Report of the Poor Law Commissioners states that there were, in 1835, "15,635 parishes or places separately relieving their own paupers." These "places," however, which would be included under the legal definition of a civil parish at the present time, were regarded only as civil subdivisions of the parish.

During the nineteenth century the subdivision of the parish went on at an increased rate, and many changes of boundary were made, both for ecclesiastical and civil purposes, but so often independently in the two cases that at the present time civil and ecclesiastical parishes are coterminous only in a minority of instances.

The townships of the north have now become civil parishes under the following circumstances. The ancient parishes in the northern counties were of great extent, having been formed apparently by the aggregation of a number of the still more ancient townships of early Saxon times, whereas in the south and midlands each township generally became a single parish. It may be, as has often been suggested, that this difference in treatment was due to greater density of population in the south, but it seems not unlikely that the principle of subdivision may have been different in the case of the northern counties (see Census Report, 1851, pp. lxiii and lxiv). After the administration of the Poor Law had been entrusted to the parish by the Act of Elizabeth, the large size of these northern parishes was found to occasion much inconvenience, and an Act of 13 Charles II therefore permitted separate townships forming parts of parishes "severally to maintain their own poor." During the course of the nineteenth century it has become customary in the census reports to refer to these northern townships as civil parishes in accordance with the definition of the Interpretation Act. It will be seen, however, that the change is one purely of nomenclature and does not imply any alteration of administrative function.

The report on the Census of 1871, as well as that of 1881, in dealing with these subdivided parishes, grouped "Civil Parishes or Townships" under the ancient parishes of which they formed portions, but in subsequent census reports the townships are enumerated as civil parishes, and no reference is made to the ancient parish as a civil area. The reason for its disappearance may perhaps be found in the fact that, after the abolition of compulsory church rates in 1868, the ancient parish ceased to be of importance as an instrument of local government.

Subdivision of these large northern parishes, as well as of many others, was also made for ecclesiastical purposes during the nineteenth century, some thousands of new ecclesiastical parishes (at first spoken of as "districts," in contradistinction to the ancient parishes, but now generally called parishes) having been formed since the year 1818 under the Church Buildings Acts, New Parishes Acts, and other Statutes. As these subdivisions were generally made independently of those adopted for civil purposes, and as the rearrangement, for the purpose of simplification, of civil parishes under the Divided Parishes Acts of 1876, 1879 and 1882, and the Local Government Acts of 1888 and 1894, did not extend to ecclesiastical parishes, the tendency to divergence between the civil and the ecclesiastical area, which had begun to manifest itself before the commencement of the nineteenth century has, as already pointed out, been enormously accentuated during its course. But the modern civil parish and the modern ecclesiastical parish have their common origin in the "parish" of the Elizabethan Act, now referred to as the ancient parish.

The total number of civil parishes at the date of the Census of 1911 was 14,614, or about 1,000 less than that of the "parishes or places separately relieving their own paupers" of 1835 (amalgamations authorized by the Local Government Act of 1888 having more than counterbalanced the subdivisions above referred to), and the total number of ecclesiastical parishes was 14,387, or almost 4,000 more than that of the "parishes and parochial chapelries" of 1821. As a result of the independent treatment of the two classes of area there are now only about 6,000 instances in which the ecclesiastical and civil boundaries coincide (see the Volume on Ecclesiastical Areas).

Unions and Registration Districts.—Although the parish was the original unit for poor law administration under the Act of Elizabeth, and although the first change in this practice was the substitution of a smaller area, the township in the north, under the Act of Charles II, a larger unit of area was found later to be desirable for some purposes and an Act of 1723 (9 Geo. I, cap. 5) enabled parishes to unite for the purpose of maintaining their joint poor in one common workhouse. This process was continued by the Act 22 Geo. III, cap. 83, 1782 (Gilbert's Act), and by the Poor Law Amendment Act of 1834, which created the Poor Law Union as it now exists.* It was the Union which was adopted as the basis for the administration of the Act for Registering Births, Deaths and Marriages, 1836 (6 and 7 Will. IV, cap. 86), under the name of "Registration District," and the Registration Districts are co-extensive with the Poor Law Unions, except in nine cases, when they comprise two entire Unions. The Registration Districts were combined for statistical purposes into Registration Counties, and then again into Registration Divisions, eleven in number for England and Wales. The number of Registration Districts on the 1st of April, 1911, was 635, including the Scilly Isles, which is not a Poor Law Union, and these were subdivided into 2,009 Registration Subdistricts, divisions of the country in which Births and Deaths are registered by a special Officer, the Registrar, and which consist of one or more civil parishes or parts of parishes.

In the Census of 1851 these divisions of the country laid down by the Poor Law and Registration Acts were definitely adopted as those "in every way best suited to a statistical survey of the population" (see Report, p. xx). At the same time, however, statistics were also published for the older territorial divisions, such as ancient counties, hundreds, wapentakes, cities and municipal boroughs, parishes, townships, extra-parochial places and liberties, and certain other anomalous divisions, besides parliamentary divisions and ecclesiastical areas.

Before the Census of 1881 took place, a fresh subdivision of the country was made which was destined by degrees to supersede in administrative importance not only the ancient territorial divisions but also the Poor Law and Registration areas. As a result of the Public Health Acts of 1872 and 1875, the Census Report of that year had to take account of 966 Urban Sanitary Districts and 578 Rural Sanitary Districts in addition to all the other areas. The Urban Districts were reorganized, but not, for the most part, newly created by this Act, but the Rural Districts were a new creation. In the formation of Poor Law Unions the principle had been adopted of taking a market town as a centre and uniting to it surrounding parishes. Though convenient for many purposes, this arrangement had the disadvantage of frequently causing Unions to comprise portions of two counties, so that the registration counties made up by the aggregation of unions or registration districts differed in many cases materially from the original or ancient counties, and therefore from the modern administrative counties, in the delimitation of which the ancient county boundaries were much more closely adhered to (see Vol. I, p. vii); for example, the Poor Law Union of Stamford extends into five, the Union of Farringdon into three, and the Union of Crickhowell into two Administrative Counties. Moreover, when sanitary districts were established under the Public Health Acts, the Union, comprising as it did in the majority of instances both urban and rural areas, proved to be ill adapted to the new requirements. As more extensive powers were naturally entrusted under these Acts to urban than to rural areas, it was necessary to constitute each town as a separate sanitary district independent of the adjacent rural area. Hence it came about that Unions were very generally divided into two or more sanitary districts, one representing the rural portion of the Union and the others the town or towns contained in it. It was inevitable, moreover, that the more homogeneous modern divisions of the Kingdom should be taken as the basis of the legislation in connection with local government; and as a result of the Local Government Acts of 1888 and 1894, there was built up on them the present organization of administrative counties, urban districts (including county and municipal boroughs) with their constituent civil parishes, and rural districts with their constituent civil parishes, which have been adopted as the units of area for the tabulation of all social statistics.

The effect of this legislation, which has temporarily increased the complications of census tabulation, owing to the necessity of retaining older areas of subdivision while the change was in progress, should ultimately tend to simplification. It is a question, for instance, whether the present amount of tabulation of census statistics by registration areas will be much longer justified. Except in regard to the Poor Law, these statistics serve no administrative purpose. The Registration Districts are, it is true, still the areas for the collection of returns of marriages, births and deaths, and the vital statistics based on these returns have, since the origin of Civil Registration in 1837, been presented for Registration Counties, Districts and Subdistricts. In order to complete the statistical record for the Decennium 1901 to 1910, it will be necessary to continue to tabulate statistics for these areas in certain of the volumes of the present report dealing with social statistics (see Vol. I, p. v). But as the vital statistics of the country from the year 1911 onwards are to be published for administrative areas, although necessarily—pending reform of the Registration Act—still collected by registration areas, this reason for tabulation by registration areas will disappear in the case of future Reports. Nothing need then be published for registration areas which is not required for the purposes of Poor Law and Registration administration, and if in time the administration of the Poor Law upon which the Registration system now depends should be entrusted to the bodies responsible for the other local government of the country, it would be possible to dispense altogether with tabulation by registration areas.

* In many places, especially in the Metropolis, the Poor Law continued to be administered under various local Acts, but by the date of the Census of 1911 the number so administered had been reduced to 8, viz., Birmingham, Brighton, Flegg, Forehoe, Hull, Oswestry, Oxford and Plymouth. A further reduction since the Census has been made by the repeal of the Birmingham Poor Act consequent on the parochial changes effected by the Act, confirming the Local Government Board's Provisional Order for the extension of Birmingham.

Civil parishes differ considerably both in area and population. The particulars for each Administrative County will be found in Table 10, Volume I, of the population tables; but taking England and Wales in the aggregate the 14,614 civil parishes may be classified according to their population as follows:—

Many of the Civil Parishes with little, or no, population came into existence in the following ways:—

- (1) Until the year 1857 there were many Extra-Parochial Places scattered throughout England and Wales, which were not rated for the relief of the Poor. An Act, however, of that year declared that every Extra-Parochial Place entered separately in the 1851 Census Report should become a separate Civil Parish; but this did not cover the case of every Extra-Parochial Place, as some were unknown to the Census Commissioners and others were only referred to in notes. In these cases the Act was merely permissive, and, therefore, probably largely inoperative, so by a later Act of 1868 it was declared that every Extra-Parochial Place existing on the 25th December, 1868, should be added to the next adjoining Civil Parish with which it had the longest common boundary. None, therefore, now remain except 12 areas (all islands).
- (2) The Local Government Act of 1894, declared that no Civil Parish could be situated partly within and partly without a Rural District, and directed that each part should become a separate Civil Parish. Some of the Civil Parishes thus automatically created were very small both in area and population; in some cases they were, and are, uninhabited. Several still remain without any definite name.

There are 46 cases in which lands are common to two or more Civil Parishes. These appear to be in the main uninclosed lands over which rights of common, or other similar rights, exist, belonging (although sometimes in varying degrees) to all, or some, of the inhabitants of two, or more Civil Parishes.

Number of Families.—Table 5 shows for each Registration District, Sub-district and Civil Parish the area, the number of families or separate occupiers, and the population enumerated in 1901 and 1911; also the population enumerated in Institutions, &c., in 1911.

As in the case of previous Censuses, the figures given in the column for "Families or Separate Occupiers" throughout the Table correspond with the number of schedules collected, and therefore include not only the numbers of private families, but also the numbers of institutions, large establishments, &c., in each area. This practice obviously renders it impossible to obtain the number of private households or the average number of persons to a private family. With a view to obtaining this information while retaining the figures relating to "Families or Separate Occupiers" for comparison with those for the previous Censuses, two new columns have been introduced into Table 5, showing for each Registration District, Sub-district, and Civil Parish, the aggregate number of institutions, large establishments, vessels, etc., and the population enumerated therein. By deducting these numbers from the total number of schedules collected and from the total population enumerated, the approximate number of private families and the number of persons comprised in such families can be ascertained. The population of England and Wales at the date of the Census of 1911 numbered 36,070,492, enumerated on 8,005,290 schedules; of these, 34,630 schedules (representing a population of 1,294,090 persons) related to institutions, large establishments, etc. The approximate number of private families in England and Wales was therefore 7,970,660, comprising a population of 34,776,402, and the average number of persons in such families was 4·4. A closer estimate of the number of private families in Urban and Rural Districts will be obtainable from the statistics as to "Tenements" to be published later.

Population and Rates of Increase.—In the Report preceding the Tables in the first volume, the Population Results of the Census were fully reviewed; it will only be necessary, therefore, to take a brief survey of the population and rates of increase in the Registration or Poor Law Areas.

Table 8 on page 429 shows for each Registration County and District:—

- (1) the population in 1901 and 1911;
- (2) the numbers of marriages, births, deaths registered in the intercensal period;
- (3) the increase or decrease of population;
- (4) the excess of births over deaths or of deaths over births;
- (5) the gain or loss by migration.

In England and Wales as a whole the increase of population in the intercensal period 1901–1911 was 3,542,649, or 10·9 per cent., which was accounted for by an excess of births over deaths of 4,044,647, equal to 12·4 per cent., and a loss by migration of 501,998, or 1·5 per cent.

The following Table shows for each Registration County what proportion of the total increase or decrease of population in the intercensal period, 1901–1911, was due to (a) natural increment and (b) to gain or loss by migration.

In all the counties the births registered in the intercensal period outnumbered the deaths, so that, had there been no migration, the population in every county would have been greater in 1911 than at the previous enumeration. But, as a matter of fact, of the 55 Registration Counties there were seven — London, Cumberland, Westmorland, Cardiganshire, Radnorshire, Montgomeryshire, and Merionethshire — in which the population decreased in the last intercensal period. These seven counties had not only lost all their natural increment, but something over and above, owing to losses by migration. There were 31 other Registration Counties in which the actual increase was less than the natural increase, while in the remaining 17 counties the actual growth as shown by enumeration was in excess of the natural growth as shown by excess of births over deaths. Of the 17 counties which absorbed population from without, it will be observed that some of the largest gains from migration were in the counties surrounding the Metropolis, viz., Middlesex (22·7 per cent.), Surrey (15·5 per cent.), Hertfordshire (8·9 per cent.), and Essex (8·5 per cent.); while two counties in which mining is the leading industry also showed considerable gains, viz., Monmouthshire (10·9 per cent.) and Glamorganshire (10·6 per cent.). The counties next in order were Carmarthenshire (8·6 per cent.) and Hampshire (7·7 per cent.). In the nine remaining counties—Nottinghamshire, Cheshire, Bedfordshire, Flintshire, Sussex, Dorsetshire, Lincolnshire, Buckinghamshire, Northumberland—the gains by migration were inconsiderable, ranging from 3·9 to 0·2 per cent.

The information furnished on the Schedules gives the birthplace of every person enumerated in England and Wales. Those born in the United Kingdom were asked to state the County and Town or Parish in which they were born; those born in any other part of the British Empire, the Dependency, Colony, &c., and the name of the Province or State; those born in foreign countries the name of the country.

When the tabulation of the birthplaces of the people has been completed it will be possible to comment more fully on the growth of some counties at the expense of others and to specify the counties which retained or lost the largest proportions of their natives.

CENSUS OF ENGLAND AND WALES, 1911.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.

- (1) Unless otherwise stated, the population figures both for 1901 and 1911, given throughout the tables, relate to the areas as constituted at the latter date.
- (2) Particulars of changes in area that have taken place since the date of the Census are, as far as possible, shown in footnotes.
- (3) The acreage quoted in the several Tables is that of land and inland water together, exclusive of tidal water and foreshore; the figures are derived from the latest returns furnished by the Director-General of Ordnance Surveys.
- (4) The spelling of the names of civil parishes in these Tables follows, with few exceptions, that adopted by the Ordnance Survey Department.
- (5) Persons on board vessels which were in the ports of England and Wales on the night of Sunday, April 2nd, 1911, or arrived there on the following day are, with certain exceptions, included in the population for the country as a whole, and are also distributed, with as much accuracy as the information obtained allows, to the several local areas. Fishermen who were at sea on the night of the Census and did not arrive in port on Monday, April 3rd, are not included in the returns of Population. The approximate numbers of absent fishermen on vessels belonging to the several ports, are given in Table 9.
- (6) The numbers of "Families or Separate Occupiers" given throughout these Tables are equivalent to the numbers of Schedules collected.

NOTE.—The population at each Census 1801 to 1831 is exclusive of the Army, Royal Navy, and Merchant Service at home and abroad; for 1841 the population includes the Army at home, men on shore belonging to the Royal Navy or to the Merchant Service, and, in a few cases, persons on board vessels in harbours; the population at each Census 1851 to 1911 includes the Army at home, men on shore belonging to the Royal Navy or to the Merchant Service, and all persons on board vessels in port on Census night or arriving the following day.

* In computing the decennial rate of increase the varying lengths of the intercensal periods have been taken into account, and the rates for the periods 1831–1841 and 1841–1851 have been further corrected by the exclusion of the Army, Navy, and Merchant Service from the population for 1841, and of the persons on board vessels from the population for 1851.

† In computing the proportion of females to males, 1801–1831, the following estimate of the numbers of men in the Army, Navy, and Merchant Service at home has been adopted:—

TABLE 5.—REGISTRATION COUNTIES, DISTRICTS AND SUB-DISTRICTS WITH THEIR CONSTITUENT CIVIL PARISHES.—URBAN OR RURAL DISTRICT IN WHICH EACH PARISH IS SITUATED; AREA; FAMILIES OR SEPARATE OCCUPIERS, AND POPULATION, 1901 AND 1911; AND POPULATION ENUMERATED IN INSTITUTIONS, LARGE ESTABLISHMENTS, AND ON VESSELS, &c., 1911.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.

(1) Registration Districts are co-extensive with Poor Law Unions or Parishes of the same names with the exception of the Registration Districts of Fulham (3), Winchester (103), Royston (135), Hatfield (138), Dorchester (264), Hereford (337), Wolverhampton (369), Chester (450), and Helmsley (531), each of which comprises two Poor Law Unions or Parishes.

(2) Where the name of the Administrative County in which a parish is situated differs from that of the Registration County, the name of the former is added in italics in Column 1; the differences between Registration Counties and Administrative Counties are shown in Table 7.

(3) In all Counties, Districts, Sub-Districts and Civil Parishes marked + changes were made in boundaries between the Census of 1901 and that of 1911.

(4) The places named in footnotes as being included in Civil Parishes are localities having no defined boundaries such as hamlets, villages &c. In many cases names applied to localities serve also as the names of Ecclesiastical Parishes, Wards, &c.

In all cases of alteration of boundary between the Census of 1901 and 1911, the figures both for 1901 and 1911 relate to the new areas.

Particulars of alterations in Registration Districts are given in Table 6, and of alterations in Civil Parishes in Table 13, Vol. I.

For particulars of alterations in Registration Sub-Districts reference should be made to the Registrar-General's Annual Reports.

(5) The figures in Column 11 represent the population enumerated:—

(a) In Military and Naval Barracks, Hospitals, Lunatic Asylums, Prisons, and Certified Reformatory and Industrial Schools (see Tables 17 and 20, Vol. I).

(b) In other Establishments, including private households, of which the number of inmates exceeded 15.

(c) On board Vessels (see Table 21, Vol. I).

(d) In Barns, Sheds, Caravans, &c., or in the Open Air (see Table 22, Vol. I).

(6) The figures in Columns 4, 5 and 10 correspond to the total number of schedules collected. If the entries in Columns 10 and 11 be deducted from those in Columns 5 and 7 respectively, the resultant figures, relating, as they do, exclusively to "families" each containing no more than 15 persons may be taken as a rough indication of the number of private families and of persons comprising such families. A closer approximation to the number of private families in the larger areas will be found in the Tables relating to Tenements, to be published in a later volume.

(7) In the Report on the Census of 1901, the corresponding Table is numbered 12 in the several County Volumes.

* The large increase in the population of Histon Civil Parish is attributed mainly to the development of the jam-making industry.

† The large increase in the population of Cherry Hinton Civil Parish is attributed mainly to its proximity to the City of Cambridge.

‡ By the Cambridge (Extension) Order, 1911, which came into operation on 1st April, 1912, the parts of Cherry Hinton, Grantchester and Trumpington Civil Parishes included in Cambridge Municipal Borough were constituted Cambridge Without Civil Parish, and the part of Chesterton Civil Parish excluded from the Municipal Borough was transferred to Milton Civil Parish. The figures at the date of the Census for the Civil Parishes as altered were as follows:—

* The figures for the Civil Parish of Thorpe next Norwich include for convenience those for an area of 2·4 acres locally situated in the City and Civil Parish of Norwich on which stand the Shirehall, County Police Station, &c., comprising 3 separate occupiers and 12 persons (4 males and 8 females). As some doubt existed as to the parochial status of this area the County Council of Norfolk issued an Order, on the 13th April, 1901, adding it to the Civil Parish of Thorpe next Norwich, but this Order has not been confirmed by the Local Government Board.

† On 1st June, 1912, Aldeby and Loddon sub-districts of Loddon Registration District were united as Loddon sub-district.

* The large increase in the population of Egg Buckland Civil Parish is attributed mainly to the presence of a larger number of troops (see Table 20, Vol. I).

† The Registration Districts of Plymouth, East Stonehouse and Devonport are co-extensive with the Civil Parishes of the same names.

‡ The population of this part of Plymouth Civil Parish includes that of the Breakwater Fort and Plymouth Lighthouses (7 males).

§ The large increase in the population of this part of Devonport Civil Parish is attributed mainly to the extension of the dockyard works at Keyham, and to an increase in the naval population. The entire Civil Parish includes 7,198 persons on board H.M. Ships.

|| The large decrease in the population of Calstock Civil Parish is attributed mainly to the closing of the metalliferous mines and granite quarries.

* The Registration District of Bristol is co-extensive with the Civil Parish of the same name.

† The large increase in the population of Stoke Gifford Civil Parish is attributed mainly to the establishment, since 1901, of Stoke Park Colony, an Institution for feeble-minded children (see Table 17, Vol. I).

‡ The large decrease in the population of Winterbourne Civil Parish is attributed mainly to the removal of workmen engaged in railway construction works which were in progress in 1901, and to the decline of stone quarrying.

* The large increase in the population of Sutton Civil Parish is attributed mainly to its proximity to Hull.

† The large increase in the population of Hessle Civil Parish is attributed mainly to its development as a residential suburb of Hull.

‡ The Registration District of Hull is co-extensive with the Civil Parish of Holy Trinity and St. Mary.

§ The large decrease in the population of Kilnsea Civil Parish is attributed mainly to the fact that in 1901 a large number of men were enumerated on barges engaged in the gravel traffic, which has now ceased.

* The constitution of Ruthin Civil Parish, as given in the above Table, is that which is recognised by the Local Authorities; on Ordnance Maps, however, part of the Parish (94 acres), as existing prior to the Local Government Act of 1894, is shown as outside the limits of the Borough, and designated "Ruthin Rural."

† The large increase in the population of Prestatyn Civil Parish is attributed mainly to its development as a seaside resort.

TABLE 8.—AGGREGATE NUMBERS OF MARRIAGES, BIRTHS AND DEATHS REGISTERED IN EACH REGISTRATION COUNTY AND IN EACH REGISTRATION DISTRICT DURING THE INTERCENSAL PERIOD 1901-11; INCREASE OR DECREASE OF POPULATION COMPARED WITH DIFFERENCE BETWEEN BIRTHS AND DEATHS.

EXPLANATORY NOTES.

- (1) Changes were made in the boundaries of many of the Registration Districts during the intercensal period. In all cases in which the change of boundary altered the population of the District the enumerated populations of the District are given, first for the District as constituted at the Census of 1901 and then as constituted at each successive change. The dates from which the changed areas were adopted for tabulation of Births and Deaths are shown in the second column. In calculating the increase or decrease of population (Col. 8) approximate allowance has been made for variations caused by changes of boundary. Owing to this method of calculation the increase or decrease of population for those Counties and Districts which have undergone change differs slightly from that derivable from the figures in Tables 2, 4 and 5, which relate to those areas as constituted at the Census of 1911. For details of the Changes in Registration Districts see Table 6.
- (2) No correction has been made in this Table for Deaths occurring in Public Institutions, which, in some cases, are sufficiently numerous to detract from the value of the comparison between the increase of Population and the excess of Births over Deaths.
- (3) The numbers of Marriages, Births and Deaths are subject to revision, having been obtained for the most recent quarters from returns furnished by local registration officers.
- (4) In the Report on the Census of 1901 the corresponding Table is numbered 22 in the several County Volumes and 17 in the Summary Volume.
